PRINCE AN OVERDOSE FROM A DEADLY DRUG

Six weeks after Prince's death at age 57, loved ones and fans finally have answers about how the beloved star's life ended. On June 2, the Midwest Medical Examiner's Office ruled the death was caused by an overdose of "self-administered fentanyl." An addictive prescription painkiller, fentanyl is 50 to 100 times more powerful than morphine—and responsible for a mounting death toll nationwide. According to sources, Prince, whose body was found in an elevator at his Paisley Park compound in Chanhassen, Minn., on April 21, had a history of opioid abuse. Andrew Kornfeld, the pre-med student who called 911 after finding the singer, described the scene as "chaos and sadness" in a CNN op-ed. (His father, addiction specialist Dr. Howard Kornfeld, had planned a "lifesaving mission" to try to save the singer, their lawyer says.) Just how Prince obtained the controlled substance is now the subject of a Carver County Sheriff's investigation. —JEFF NELSON

The medical examiner performed an autopsy and toxicology test on Prince, but other details surrounding the last night of the singer's life will be kept private.

HARTSOCK Baby on the Way!

She's expecting her first child with husband Chris Siegfried in October, but for now, former Bachelorette Desiree Hartsock, 30, is focusing on her other baby—her new book, My Fairytale Wedding, on sale now. "I want to help brides plan a stress-free day," says the wedding-gown designer of her bridal guide. Life for the former reality-show contestant has "come full circle" now that she's prepping for baby. "It only hit me recently that I'm actually pregnant," says Hartsock. For his part, Chris has been pulling early daddy duty, encouraging Hartsock to rest and appeasing her cravings. "He's been awesome," says Hartsock. "I'm so lucky." —AILI NAHAS

BEN & JEN NOT BACK TOGETHER

They may be exes, but the two stars just took a European family vacation together—sparking rumors of a reconciliation. But back home in L.A., the pair went their separate ways. Affleck appeared at the Spike Guys' Choice Awards June 4, while Garner took their kids, Violet, 10, Seraphina, 7, and Samuel, 4, to church the next day. Though the trip overseas (where Affleck filmed Justice League) was enjoyed by all, Garner "denies that she is back with Ben," says a friend. "She actually almost laughs when asked." Sources say Affleck, who headed back to London, would like to patch things up, but Garner hasn't changed her mind. "She seems adamant about going through with it," says the friend. "She seems to want the divorce, but doesn't seem to mind at all that it's not finalized."
